Gardens of Earthly Delight: The Story of Melbourne's Public Gardens
 5 November 2005 - 26 February 2006

Gardens of Earthly Delight presents the story of Melbourne's public parks & gardens, as told through their historic development. The exhibition focuses on the gardens which encircle the CBD - Carlton, Fitzroy, Flagstaff, Treasury, Queen Victoria, Alexandra and Royal Botanic Gardens, and Birrarung Marr.

Historic photographs are shown alongside contemporary aerial photographs of each garden. The exhibition also identifies key events in the gardens' history, and the gardeners and bureaucrats who helped shape them. The transition from wasteland to wonderland has been anything but smooth for most of the gardens, and the exhibition places Melbourne's major gardens in an historical and social context, by illustrating their uses over the last 150 years.

The exhibition features works by contemporary Melbourne artists Rowena Marshall and Rebecca Ogden, which are complemented by displays of historical and ephemeral garden material.
